

Linda Mills Woolsey, class of 1970, earned a Bachelor of Arts Degree from Houghton College in 1974, a Master of Arts Degree in English Literature from SUNY Binghamton in 1976, and a Doctorate of Philosophy Degree in Nineteenth Century Studies from Drew University in 1989.

Dr. Woolsey is currently a Professor of English and the English and Communication Department Chair at Houghton College in New York. In addition, Dr. Woolsey serves as a faculty member for the First Year Honors Program.

She has written numerous scholarly publications, articles, poems, short stories, and essays. Also, Dr. Woolsey has been selected to present at conferences worldwide including Italy, the United Kingdom, and India.

Dr. Linda Mills Woolsey has received many honors and awards for her teaching and writing excellence. She has recently been invited to participate in the CCCU Advanced Leadership Institute, awarded the Appalachian Heritage's Denny C. Platner Award for Excellence in Fiction, and the Sears-Roebuck Foundation Teaching Excellence and Campus Leadership Award.